

“A PASSION FOR SERVICE AND RESULTS”

How much can I afford?

Debt can become a huge burden if you're not careful. So it's important to keep your total debt load in balance, not just your mortgage payments. Simply, when purchasing a home, you need to focus on your entire financial well being.

There are two simple rules, mortgage professionals use when reviewing your mortgage application and how much you can afford:

- Gross Debt Service Ratio (GDSR): Your monthly housing costs shouldn't exceed 32% of your gross monthly income. Monthly housing costs include but are not limited to: your mortgage payments, property taxes, heating, and 50% of condominium or strata fees.
- Total Debt Service Ratio (TDSR): Your entire monthly costs shouldn't exceed 40% of your gross monthly income. Those expenses include but are not limited to: your housing costs and other debt such as: car loans/lease, credit card payments, personal loans and line of credit payments.
